Q&A WITH AFRICAN TRAVEL PRESIDENT SHERWIN BANDA

Recognized as one of Robb Report magazine's "16 LGBTQ+ Visionaries in Luxury You Should Know," Sherwin is passionate about creating diverse and safe spaces for all who visit Africa.

Sherwin sat down for a Q&A to discuss the realities of LGBTQ+ travel in Africa and what destinations need to be on your radar.

What do you think is one of the major misconceptions about LGBTQ+ travel in Africa?

A common misconception is Africa is not safe for travelers, and especially LGBTQ+ guests. Most people don't know that South Africa legalized same sex marriage in 2006 which was years before U.S. recognized same sex marriage. There is still a long way to go to have gay marriage recognized across Africa, however LGBTQ+ people are living and thriving in the destination.

Lodges, camps, and hotels are well-vetted to meet international service standards and the specific needs of all guests.

You will come for the wildlife, but the people will steal your heart. Africans are some of the friendliest people on earth.

Growing up in South Africa, how did this influence you in life?

I grew up during apartheid and listening to the stories of teachers, religious leaders and elders cultivated a desire for change within the youth. They challenged us to find an alternative without compromising our traditions or sense of humanity. Those early learnings shaped my desire to live in a life of service and to be 100% inclusive for all.

What would you recommend guests do while visiting?

Known as the Rainbow Nation, South Africa truly offers something for everyone. Cape Town is referred to as the “Mother City” of South Africa and is very gay friendly, with the largest LGBTQ+ community in all of Africa. There are many exciting places to see throughout the city. The pink district called De Waterkant has many LGBTQ+ friendly bars, restaurants, and nightlife.

What are some emerging destinations LGBTQ+ travelers should consider?

While some countries, many of which are in West Africa, outlaw homosexuality, the continent has made great strides. It may have started in Southern Africa, but change is moving north.

Botswana sets the gold standard for sustainability, and it continues to progress since it decriminalized same sex relationships in 2019.

The experiences here are outstanding because the government has limited the number of camps, so you have a truly intimate experience.

I would highly recommend relaxing on a beach at the end of a trip and Mozambique has some beautiful beaches. The country also decriminalized same sex relationships in 2015. Seychelles has some wonderful resorts opening this year, including the new Waldorf Astoria and the Seychelles also makes it illegal to discriminate based on sexual orientation.
